

AFRICAN AMERICAN STUDIES, CERTIFICATE OF ACHIEVEMENT

The African American Studies Certificate of Achievement program prepares students to analyze African American communities' social relations of power and histories, assess community-formation strategies for African Americans, and apply social sciences, humanities, community organizing resources, and creative social change to promote social justice and equity with a particular focus on African American communities. Successful completion of the program enables students to evaluate and influence institutional and social contexts using an intersectional approach to race, gender, class, and sexuality. This certificate enhances leadership capacity for students with professional aspirations, enabling them to work with various African American communities in various fields such as community organizing, nonprofit organizations, public policy, public service, or business.

Upon successful completion of the program, students will be able to:

- Analyze and assess the obstacles, strategies, and systems behind African American community development and empowerment.
- Apply intersectional analysis to explore African American histories and communities to better understand and lead community engagement.
- Apply the analytical skills of the social sciences and interpretive methods of the humanities toward promoting greater social justice and equity, with particular emphasis on African Americans.
